Jeff Maurice announces candidacy for Williamson County Commissioner, Precinct 4

Williamson County, Texas -- Hutto resident Jeff Maurice announced his candidacy today for Williamson County Commissioner, Precinct 4. Maurice, a Democrat, will challenge incumbent Republican Ron Morrison in the Nov. 2, 2010 general election.

“It’s time for the citizens of Precinct 4 to be represented by someone who has their best interests at heart,” Maurice said. “From the Hutto landfill to property tax rates, the citizens of Precinct 4 have been repeatedly ignored when it comes to issues that have the greatest impact on our community.”

An attorney and former Dell senior corporate counsel, Maurice has lived in Hutto for six years and has dedicated himself to public service. He currently serves 4,800 Williamson county residents as an elected Board Member of the Jonah Water Special Utility District and chairs the Landfill Committee of the Hutto Citizens Group. He was also a founding member of the Williamson County Public Policy Coalition. In addition to his community service work, Jeff and his wife Shawn rescue and provide a home for animals in need at their ranch in Hutto.

“I’ve found out that you can make change happen if you approach issues professionally and with persistence, and that’s the approach I intend to take on the Commissioners Court,” Maurice said. “Like many Williamson County residents, I’m frustrated by political gamesmanship. As County Commissioner, I’ll always consider the needs of my constituents first and foremost.”

Maurice already has established a campaign website, which will be continuously updated. The website address is: www.votejeffmaurice.com .
